

Education for SDGs in the wider community

Have dedicated outreach educational activities for the wider community, which could include alumni, local residents, displaced people

Alumni

The University is committed to promoting education for the SDGs (Sustainable Development Goals) through dedicated outreach programs that engage the wider community, including alumni, local residents, and displaced populations. These activities focus on spreading awareness and providing practical knowledge about sustainable development, social justice, health, and environmental responsibility. The outreach initiatives include:

Engaging alumni in knowledge-sharing programs, encouraging them to participate in community development projects, and share their expertise to address SDG challenges in their respective regions.

Local community

Through the above mentioned efforts, the University fosters a culture of learning and action that contributes to the broader goals of sustainable development, both locally and globally.
